

Paul Heron of One Real Estate in Darwin

Paul Heron understands the importance of choosing the right home - in the right place.

Starting his real estate career with Ray White in Melbourne in 2006, Paul and his family now call Darwin home. "Darwin is the right fit for us, I love property and I enjoy working with people every day to find the home that's the perfect fit for them," Paul says.

With a background in business and hospitality management, including about four years in Scotland and Ireland, Paul brings a strong customer service focus to his clients. Paul grew up in Tasmania and has always enjoyed real estate - he purchased his first home when he was 20 years old.

The father-of-two has an interest in modern eco-sustainability and has studied building biology.

"Increasingly, people want to live in a healthy environment and are concerned by factors affecting their health, including their home's air quality and toxicity," Paul says.

"These factors are not only important considerations for people who suffer asthma or allergies, but for anyone who wants to maintain good health."

Paul has an EcoBroker designation and provides his real estate clients with a range of optional services. Services include providing simple tips to improve the home, referrals to appropriate specialists and arranging eco-reports.
